Enrolling in a course such as Offshore Cruising: Preparing Craft & Crew signals that you are serious about safety at sea and getting to your destination with the least hassle. In fact, some insurers will take into account this type of training when setting your cruising limits and, for that matter, your rates. This varies according to the type of boat insurance you have and individual underwriting policies. Not all insurers do it, but it's worth asking about when you are filling out that application for coverage.

See you in class,
