“Your boat is always talking to you. You need to listen,” says Jeff Merrill, instructor for Offshore Cruising: Preparing Craft & Crew. “It doesn’t matter whether you have sail or power, how old your boat is or what you have aboard, I like to think of each boat as a living entity.” He explains how using your senses, not the least of which is the sense of smell, will help identify problems before they reach crisis stage.

Merrill will also talk about the kinds of things marine surveyors look for when they are evaluating boats for buyers, as he compares surveyors to boat detectives looking for clues. One of the course goals is to show how owners can adopt the same approach and use their new found vigilance in real time.
